MR. KARSHNER'S RAILROAD.
It is Run with Less Nonsense than Any Other
Railroad in the World.

ADELPHI, Ohio, Dec. 10.—This old but picturesque village, whose incorporation includes the northeast corner of Ross county, is a terminus at this time of a railroad that has no parallel in the United States. The corporate name is attention enough. It is the Cincinnati, Hooking Valley and Huntington Railroad, which would cover a line from Cincinnati north of Chillicothe, thence to the Hooking Valley and to Huntington, on the Ohio River, a distance of 180 miles. But the road is but ten miles in length, as built, running from Adelphi to the Valley, and thence to Huntington. It is essentially the creation of one man, and his present relation to it makes it a road unlike any other. The line could scarcely be better. Leaving the Scioto Valley Railroad at Kingston, it runs nearly due north, deflecting a little to the south to reach the Valley, and thence to Huntington. The track lies almost all the way on the surface of a level, and is so constructed that it requires one short low trestle, and almost no cuts. A considerable portion of it is in the fertile rolling country between the Scioto and the Valley, through rich and productive farming lands, and the crops are so good that the owners of these lands, which have hitherto been dependent on long hauls by wagons for all their produce, are anxious to sell to the railroad. The town of Adelphi owes its existence in the first place to the desire to add to the line of travel in this section. Between Marietta, the first town in Ohio, and Chillicothe, which is the terminus of the Cincinnati and Marietta, and of the State of Ohio. The next reason for its existence is the natural beauty of the country, and the fact that the hills and the hills and the broad and fertile plains and prairies, as they were called by the early settlers, are so beautiful that the owners of the ground, with high points of view adjoining, from which the beauties of Laurel Valley, a branch of the Scioto Valley, can be seen, and with the broad fertile bottom lands of Salt Creek, which runs for miles to the south, and miles southward without a break. Pennsylvanians formed the majority of its founders.

One of them, John Karschner, is the organizer of this road. He is a wealthy farmer, a politician, and was always a man of push and enterprise. He talked railroad as long as he could, and he has now obtained right of way with some donations, and as the company never had any funds to build the road, Mr. Karschner (old farmer that he is) has been forced to do the work himself, and undertook with his own means to build the road from Kingston to Adelphi. He went at it with a vengeance, and he has been by shrewd and careful business management in due course of time saw his ideal accomplished. He has now built the road for ten miles of road built, and the company, which had looked on during the building, began to despair of the success of the road, and so did not sleep on his rights, and he assumed possession of the road, and he has now, by the money and action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

When the road was built he sold the crops of his land, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

He called him the John Karschner. Then he had built a combination passenger and freight car, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

But being an active man, though over 70 years of age, he soon disposed of all superfluous land, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

Mr. Karschner goes on every train as a conductor, brakeman, baggage-master, mail and express agent, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

He has no running arrangements with other roads; he has no running accounts for freight, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

He does not require a bookkeeper, nor even a clerk. He pays the Scioto Valley its share of the road, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.

He collects the whole upon delivery of the road, and he has now, by the action of his hands, rendered, litigation to oust him was begun, but so far as the road is concerned, the conflict no other judgment can be rendered.
